O'DONNELL'S BODY IS BROUGHT HOME

Famous Motor Speed Demon Will be Buried in White-water Cemetery.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

White-water.—The body of Eddie O'Donnell, famous speed demon who was killed in the automobile races at Beverly Hills, Cal., last Thanksgiving, is enroute to this city where his family lives and where he will be buried. The body is accompanied by Mrs. O'Donnell, widow of the famous racer. She will be met at Chicago by Mrs. James O'Donnell, mother of Eddie O'Donnell and the body will arrive in White-water Friday. No funeral arrangements will be made until that time.

Eddie O'Donnell was one of the most prominent figures in American speedway circles and had been a consistent winner in his races. He was born and reared on a farm near White-water, leaving White-water in 1910, he became connected with the Mitchell Motors company of Milwaukee, where he lived and entered the racing game as a mechanician in 1912. He drove his first race at Kalamazoo, in 1913, and won second place.

He met his death in one of the greatest tragedies in the history of the American speedway, dying from injuries sustained at the Thanksgiving Day races in 1920, when his Chevrolet lost control of his car and smashed into the car driven by O'Donnell, killing both Lynn Jolls and Chevrolet.

O'Donnell is survived by his wife, his parents, three brothers, and two sisters.

Lakota Married Men Garner All Events at Picnic

Married athletes of the Lakota club made almost a clean sweep of events at the Lakota picnic, which was held at Lake Koshkonong, Wednesday afternoon. By a hair-raising rally in the last three innings, they came from the tail end of a 14-4 score, and won the baseball game by a score of 19 to 17. Outweighing the single men 20 pounds to a man, the bachelors finally came out on top in the tug-of-war although they were forced to use every ounce of strength to win.

But for the factness of Joe Denning, the married men would have captured every honor. Denning emerged winner in the thrilling 100 yard dash over George Sennett and Edward Forster. Forster's remarkable speed was given first prize—a bouquet of three daffodils.

Sixty-five members attended. The trip to the lake was a very successful one. A dinner was served by Cash Williams at Horst's hotel at 7 o'clock. The affair was a big success throughout due to the efforts of Owen D. Slavem and his fellow workers.

The ball game marked the second victory of the year for the married men who are fast adding to their ranks the stars of the old single men's teams. The day was hot, bright and glorious with a good deal of squabbling about umpires. "Umps" Jimmie Quinn was put off the job at the bases in the sixth inning when the candidates following pulled the A. Clubb suit, following a close decision. Kendall Newman took his place and gave satisfaction.

Denning twirled a great game for the single men for six innings when he retired in favor of MacDonald. The latter was hit hard and frequently which coupled with a blow-up of the support gave the married men the game. Langsdorf pitched steadily but for the married men throughout the nine innings.

Phelps Leo and Laird were the fielding stars for the losers while Segerson and Sennett took the non-agers for the other side. Walter L.

AMERICAN EXPORT FIRMS ARE PLAYED

Lax Methods Costing Yankee Companies Millions in Lost Business, Claim.

Riga, Latvia. —Millions of dollars in ready cash are going to English, German and Dutch firms from the Baltic States, because of the almost unbelievable laxity of the even the laxest American firms with foreign trading conditions and even geography, say Americans here.

Dozens of big orders, for which cash was actually in the banks in New York, have been lost to American because of what American representatives in the Baltic states term absolute stupidity.

"It is time," said one of these Americans in Riga, who has had to place many orders in Germany and in England when American could have had them, "that the heads of American firms realize what the consequences in charge of their foreign trading departments are doing to them."

"Most of them, brought up on so-called American efficiency systems that may work well at home but are absolutely hopeless abroad, try to do business in Europe according to form 22 or form 24 or whatever form they would apply to similar deals in America."

Sample of inefficiency. —"To illustrate, not long ago I had an urgent cash order for 40,000 suits of underclothing for a Baltic state," telegraphed to a big American firm. "What your price, 40,000 suits heavy underwear cash against documents New York?"

"Two or three days later, when some bright young credit man had tried to digest this telegram, I received a cable saying: 'Wire your credit rating and references.'"

"Now, I suppose his 'form 22' required him to do that, but I wired him to get the references. The cable came in New York bank. 'What are your prices?'"

"Some days later I received a telegram. 'Price $1.00 a dollar twenty or something like that.'"

"More valuable time was lost in an exchange of telegrams asking what they meant, per garment or what. I told him that I was an English firm. My answer from it was complete, just what I wanted. The telegram gave the price per suit, weight of shipment, probable date of delivery and everything I wanted to know. The English firm got the order and took the cash in the New York bank."

Much Time Lost. —"When I wrote the American firms for catalogues, I got catalogues without prices. I suppose they think it is undignified to print them. Then I write for price lists and get price lists without catalogues."

German or British firms print complete catalogues, giving just what one wants to know. They save valuable weeks of mail correspondence and get the orders."

Another American in trade in Riga showed the correspondent a cablegram from one of the biggest oil companies in America. It was a telegram which said: "Quote me price refined coal oil delivered Riga." The answer read: "Crude oil has gone up 20 cents a barrel."

"Now," said this American dealer, "I didn't want to know about crude oil and I haven't time to figure out what effect a rise in its price would have on coal oil which was badly wanted by my buyer."

Must Pay Extra Postage. —"In many of such ridiculous cases I have telegraphed directly to the heads of firms in America, explaining the situation and have received prompt satisfaction. But I haven't the time to write all of them. So the Germans and English get the orders."

Incidentally, perhaps half of the letters sent by American firms to the Baltic states bear only two cent postage stamps, causing indignant prospective buyers to dig down in their pockets to pay postage in rubles or marks of whatever the unit happens to be.

Some of them bear fantastic addresses, such as "Riga, Russia, via the Pacific." One letter in reply to request to ship for cash a big consignment of goods from New York to Riga said the firm was sorry "but had no shipping facilities on the Pacific."

POPULAR SONG; WORDS PENNED BY LOCAL GIRL

Words to one of the popular songs that has just appeared in the city—"Pals"—were written by Miss Hazel Palmer, 213 Dodge street. The music was composed by A. Leopold Richard and the song published by a musical publishing company of Chicago.

The words for the chorus are as follows: "P is for partners we were in trouble and in fun. A is for the admiration we have known since friendship began. L is for love, the greatest gift of all. S is for sweethearts, summer, spring and fall."

These four small letters spell pals, a word we adore; It means we give our hearts to each other. Who could care for more? Pals, a symbol of love, tried and true; But of all the pals there is but one for me, dear. And that one is you."

The song is being sold at several of the music stores in the city.

JACK'S STILL CAREFUL OF INJURED HEAD

little increased; one could scarcely notice any effect of the exertion on his conversation at the moment. His heart action was but a few beats faster than before the exercise and returned to normal rate in little more than a minute.

A Marvelous Heart

The tiger has a wonderfully efficient heart, a large heart of course, and of all his muscles that great heart muscle of his is the one most likely to win for him the championship of the world.

Next he entered the roped-in cage out back of the gymnasium and sparred a few rounds with three lusty sparring partners, planting some emphatic jabs on the ribs of the cook especially, who perhaps had permitted the coffee to boil that morning. There is many a cook for whom I should like to prescribe such treatment.

Critics who probably have not seen Carpenter in action profess to believe that his legs are too heavy or too muscular. They are muscular legs, all right. I have never seen better legs on an athlete. But as he uses them they are as light and velocity as the legs of a cat. He is a tiger with his powerful legs. In the heat of battle his eyes flash menacingly and the lightning swiftness with which he jumps around the roped cage must be utterly discouraging to any adversary bent on taming or subduing him. Let no one worry about the weight of his boxer's feet. We might better confine our anxiety, if any, to the question whether Carpenter's cervical shock absorbing muscles which will be described later—as well adapted to protect him from Dempsey's jaw punches or uppercuts as Dempsey's shock absorbers are to protect him from Carpenter's telling blows. We will look into that problem further along.

Having in mind the long, early morning bite and parry of six to ten miles and the strenuous blast four at the bags, with several minutes of vigorous shadow boxing, all of which preceded the sparring with three partners in succession, I expected the 22-year-old champion would knock off work now and call it a day. Instead he merely posed for a snapshot or two—succumbing to the temptation to stick out his tongue at the photographer just as the picture was snapped—and then without pausing for rest immediately began a series of additional exercises calculated to increase muscle responsiveness and coordination.

A Unique Training Stunt

Rope skipping is popularly reckoned a child's pastime. I have always realized that it is good training for the child's heart, but I never before imagined an athlete training for a championship boxing match would skip the rope for exercise. Carpenter skipped rope some 500 times while I watched and that included some difficult stunts.

Now I examine him carefully, for all that rope-skipping, on top of what he has already done this afternoon will surely show on the man's heart, but not. It is not. This is a tiger I examine, or say a man with a tiger's heart's feet. We might better confine our anxiety, if any, to the question whether Carpenter's cervical shock absorbing muscles which will be described later—as well adapted to protect him from Dempsey's jaw punches or uppercuts as Dempsey's shock absorbers are to protect him from Carpenter's telling blows. We will look into that problem further along.

heart muscle, developed by thoroughly scientific training.

Double a Dempsey Victory.

The prolonged and intricate rope-skipping exercise proved but a preliminary to a series of beautifully executed setting-up and floor exercises, resembling those used in the army and familiar to some thousands of my readers in the Brady Symposium. As Carpenter does these exercises his breathing is correctly timed so that, he inspires with movements extending or straightening out the body and expires with movements flexing or bending the body. He executes every movement with the utmost thoroughness and precision, accomplishing several with ease that would be very difficult if not impossible for many of us even though we are accustomed to similar ones daily. For instance he will lie on his back, lift both legs free from the floor and swing them far around to the right, always not more than a foot from the floor then straight up and across to the corresponding position on the left and around to starting position many times and reverse. Try this once and see what a mess you will make of it. Or, again, he rolls up forward from his prone position, but on one foot only, and carries the other foot under him and extends the leg straight in front, then back to the prone again, without once touching the free foot to the floor. This exercise is evidently for poise and balance. There is nothing whatever the matter with Georges Carpenter's legs.

The training of the French champion and the whole environment of his camp, in my judgment, closely approximate the ideal and as for the physical condition of the man himself, saving those shock absorbers for further discussion, I doubt whether he can be beaten.

Not in Confidence of Great Britain in Anglo-Jap Alliance Confab.

By DAVID LAWRENCE.
Copyright 1921, by Janesville Gazette.
Washington, June 22.—Great Britain has failed to take the United States into her confidence in the negotiations going on at London and Tokyo with respect to the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

The department of state has deliberately made a point of that fact in dispelling the rumors of the last few days which, for one purpose or another, have sought to give the impression that England was hand in glove with the United States and was attempting anything which would possibly involve the Japanese in the event of a Japanese-American war.

The Washington government doesn't insist that Great Britain is obliged to keep America informed of the progress of the negotiations, but it is indignantly denied that America is a party directly or indirectly to the negotiations. The United States government has returned to the negotiations to the negotiations for the renewal of the alliance, but as to the exact effect of the present alliance on the attitude of Great Britain toward Japan, the United States government has asked recently in the house of commons whether the "terms of the treaty arrangement between England and Japan preclude the possibility of assistance to Japan in any conflict which might arise between that country and the United States, and if assistance on this point have been given the American government in connection with its consideration of a naval building program."

The question was asked largely to determine whether it would be necessary for England to maintain her large navy for a future emergency of this kind and whether it would be necessary for the United States to keep on building up her navy because of the excuse of a possible conflict with Japan.

The answer, publicly made in parliament, was that the Anglo-Japanese alliance, which was signed in 1911 and expires next month, simply provided that Great Britain was not obliged to come to the assistance of Japan in any conflict with any other country with which England had a "general arbitration treaty." At that time the United States signed an understanding with Japan, but in connection with its consideration of a naval building program, it failed of ratification.

"Subsequently, however," declared the British under secretary of foreign affairs in his statement of course in behalf of the British government "a peace commission treaty was signed and duly ratified on the fifteenth of September, 1921, (the Bryan treaty), under which when all diplomatic methods of adjustment had failed, disputes between the countries of any nature whatsoever other than those of a purely commercial character, provided for are to be referred to an investigation commission. The peace commission treaty is not technically a general arbitration treaty, but their objects are identical."

Doesn't involve U. S.
"My honorable and gallant friend will understand from my answer that our relations with Japan are so arranged as not to involve America. As regards the second part of the question no official communication has been sent to the United States of America, as there is no reason to believe that the responsible authorities are in any doubt as to the true position."

The foregoing declaration was made on March 1 of this year, and was communicated in the British embassy at London to the department of state, and constitutes the only record of the British attitude which the United States has been given.

The British officials place their emphasis on the language of the Bryan treaty, which obligates Great Britain to submit to a permanent investigation committee "of any nature whatsoever" which would seem to cover any dispute arising as a consequence of Britain's alliance with Japan if the latter should get into war with the United States.

Nevertheless the British dominions whose representatives are gathered in London are not altogether satisfied on this point, and it may be necessary for the declaration to be repeated for its effect on those parts of the British empire which are inclined to be apprehensive that the race question will some day range them on the side of the United States.

Assurances Unofficial
So far as the American government is concerned, on the other hand, the assurances publicly made in parliament are by no means official. They were not given to the American government directly and as such have not much more value than a newspaper interview with a subordinate official. The United States is in official ignorance, therefore, of the British attitude, and it would not be surprising if it were a frank confession of that fact drew from the British government an official assurance substantially the same as that made publicly in parliament the text of which is quoted above. This would go a long way toward removing apprehensions concerning a British-American dispute in the event of war with Japan.

WISCONSIN MAKES 70 PCT. OF CHEESE

Records Show Badger State Produces Two-Thirds of U. S. Supply.

Forty-six Wisconsin counties are producing in all 30 kinds of cheese to most two thirds of the nation's demand for sandwich fillings, pie components and southeast foods.
Perhaps the most significant feature about the cheese industry is that the more popular foreign types are now being produced here as successfully as in the old countries.
Commenting upon the status of the present industry, L. S. Sammis, of the college of agriculture, expressed the opinion that co-operative marketing facilities are helping materially to improve the state's cheese industry.
"Team work," declared Mr. Sammis, "is actually helping to market our cheese and it is bringing a large number of cheese factories up to a higher standard of quality production. The factory operator who lags behind is being made to come up to the standard set by the efficient factory operators."

Just now, when prices of cheese are temporarily low, the product of really good quality is getting the better price. Factories are being compelled by force of economic conditions to turn out a product of better quality for the demand for under-grade cheese is steadily waning.
Mr. Sammis estimates that at the present time Wisconsin is producing 70 per cent of the nation's cheddar supply. A year ago the state produced more than 225 million pounds of American cheese, Shaboygan and Marquette counties are now manufacturing Camembert, the French cheese, and Neufchatel is being shipped from Monroe, Wausau, Milwaukee, Dane, Walworth, and Grant other counties. While Wisconsin is a center of production for all dairy products, its cool temperature aids it in building its reputation as a cheese state.
Better cheese men declare that the growing recognition of the food value of dairy products is aiding to stimulate the consumption of cheese. While Americans are said not to have as fine a taste for cheese as the Europeans, the nation's taste is steadily improving.

THE GIRL WHO HAD NO CHANCE

By Marion Rubincam

CHAPTER LXVI.
NEW SHADOWS
The boom grew bigger and bigger. Ruth found herself swamped under the amount of business she had to attend to. As far as her real estate work went, she hired one of the young men of the town and put him in to handle the details.
"Write out a brief report of all you do each day and lay it on my desk," she said, "I'll look it over when I have time, and if there's anything wrong, I'll make corrections on the paper and give it back to you."
Thus easily she disposed of some of her work. It was a new feeling—this of being employer, rather than employee.
She had a telephone put in her house, so she could be reached in the evenings. Mrs. Belding still lived there—for rents had gone up, and Mrs. Belding could not afford more than $5 a week. She still saved—when she could for sewing.
"I'll take a third floor room," she said. "And Ruth, you can have my room for your study again, goodness knows you need it. Just look at this mess of papers!" She indicated a confusion on Ruth's bedroom table.
"Don't touch them," the girl exclaimed from the bed. "Mrs. Belding has plans for a whole city of them!"
"Have you now? Well, I always said you'd do something. Well, dearie, I don't much use around here, but I'm going to make you some dresses. You may have plans for a city, but I'll make a new dress something awful!"
"All right," the girl answered cheerfully.
So the stiff-fingered little old lady set to work on models, which she called "gowns."
Mrs. O'Neil was for putting all the money in the bank. Ruth wanted to buy city bonds that would finance the city. "I'll need new material! It ought to be silk. I think maybe pink taffeta!" Mrs. Belding began one morning at breakfast.
"Pink taffeta? It's $1.50 a yard if it's a cent, and it takes five yards and money to trim it. I've got a good blue poplin in the attic, why can't that?" The argument went on, Ruth cutting it by saying in a slightly modified voice—
"Use the poplin. What difference does it make?"
"Seems to me," grumbled Mrs. Belding on her way upstairs after the discussed material, "Seems to me that it's a girl's bringing in several thousand dollars a year, she might be allowed $15 for a dress!"
"But I'm not bringing in several thousand!" Ruth answered gently, putting on her old-fashioned hat, the hallway. "I'm putting all my money into bonds, and mother doesn't believe in bonds!"
"Humph!" was all the reply that came, as the tiny figure went on up the steps.
Ruth went down to her office. The little place was now used as headquarters for the Civic Committee. She had sent for the stenographer from the factory from whom she had learned shorthand, and made the girl her secretary. This was a great change. Ruth answered her with a spirit of gratitude for the knowledge she had gained; as a matter of fact, the girl made a very poor secretary.
Her work required no many trips to the factory, but she knew she needed a car. Langley urged her to buy one, but whenever she suggested it to her mother, that lady threw up her hands and talked about extravagance.
"Phone for a machine," she told her secretary when she reached the office. "I have to go over to the flats today. You'll better come along. I'll have some notes to dictate."
As they went over in the hired car, she opened the morning's mail, giving suggestions for answers to the girl, who tried to get new stars in short hand as the car jumped over the rough roadway.
She had various ideas of things to be done in the building of the first block of houses, but which were taken down in shorthand to be made up later in a report for the Civic Committee. Out on the flats—as they called these fields and the newly built up parts of the town—Langley and a few members of the Committee.
"Every bend is sold," she was told by one of the committee. "The Markham people have taken them all. A lot of the gentry—a term used for the wealthy residents of the nearby estates—have bought up some too."
Langley went with her and they walked over the place, planning, changing, suggesting. Ruth was in her element in this. She and Langley walked and talked and worked together hours at a time—always thinking of the place they were building, always of the work in hand. No word of sentiment ever passed between them.

Langley knew the heartache the girl carried for the man whose name he never asked. Ruth knew that Langley still loved the heartless little woman in the Middle West, who had left him for a richer man.
As they were laughing over something that occurred on the fields, a messenger came running towards them.
"Why, it's your office assistant!" Langley said, recognizing the young man Ruth had hired for her real estate office.
"Some tenant has committed suicide and not paid his rent," he suggested. The messenger ran up.
"Your mother phoned, says it's important. Your father had an attack a little while ago. Says she's sent for the doctor and you'd better hurry. Says maybe it's fatal this time."
A lot of workmen, digging foundations for the new block of houses, looked up at this interruption. They saw the girl's face go white, they saw her lurch a few steps as she turned towards the hired auto.
"All right, steady now," Langley's calm, thoughtful face broke into a smile. "Steady, Ruth! You always keep up. We'll drive there in no time."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor Gazette:
In your issue of June 18th, you have an editorial against revolvers which was very evidently written by someone not at all familiar with the subject, as they say a revolver is made only for man killing and is not used for hunting, nor is it a thing of beauty. The revolver is used as an always been used for hunting by a great many men. Have kept and used a revolver for years and have killed considerable small game with it, and I have a number of friends who have done the same.
Take the revolver from the law-abiding citizen and you do not disarm the thug and holdup man, as they will obtain guns by smuggling or otherwise. The so-called Sullivan of New York has proved this to be a fact, and police records show that crime increased in the state after the Sullivan law was enacted. We have a Revolver Club made up of citizens of Milton and Milton Junction, and the man who thinks that revolvers are only for man-killing should attend the club some evening and he would find that some law-abiding people have both sport and recreation in pistol and revolver shooting.
To make an opinion on a revolver is not a thing of beauty, but a blow from one would be as deadly as a shot from a revolver, so why not pass a law against golf clubs as it would be in the same line of logic.
Pass a law that every household shall own and be familiar with the use of a first class pistol or revolver, and you will do more to put a crimp in the so-called crime wave than by any anti-gun legislation that you can pass, as there would be a change of heart on the part of the tough element of the country, as they would give a wide berth to the man who they knew was armed and knew how to use the arm.
The smoke has hardly cleared away from the battlefields and men and women are agitating against the manufacture and use of one of the most effective weapons used by our troops. Do you suppose that the Colt's 45 automatic would have made the hero in the ranks of the Helms during the late unpleasantness if they had been in the hands of boys who were ignorant of the art of shooting, and that is the proposition that we will be up against if some people have their way. The only way Uncle Sam was able to get his troops supplied with hand guns was by calling on the manufacturers who had been supplying the citizens of the country for generations, and in case of another war we will need their aid again.
A good pistol in the hands of a woman who knows how to use it puts her on an even footing with the biggest man on earth, and many a woman rests easier for the thought that she has and knows how to handle a revolver.
The man who makes the statement that a revolver is not a thing of

Cream City Sox Land on Smithson, Beat Tractors 9-3

Copyright 1920 by Geo. McManus.

HIT SMITHY HARD; LATHROP TO TRY TO ADD TO STREAK

Columbus, Wis.—Before a small crowd and on poor grounds the Janesville Tractors Wednesday afternoon hit into a circuit, ran upon boggy ground and before they pulled out of the mud left a trail of defeat behind them. Walter Lange's Cream City Red Sox were the victors, 9 to 3. The first time this season, Smithson was out of stuff. The Milwaukee outfit reached him early and batted him hard until genial Jack Watson was rushed in with hopes of holding the handclapper but he suffered just as much as "Lefty."

At Portage Thursday, Lange's Scarlet Hose connected with 12 hits. Two of them were circuit clouts. Schultz and Lewis getting one a piper. The Tractors got seven hits and before they were able to bunch them.

The Tractors are going after the Lake Shore club with fire in their eyes. "Smithy" Lathrop Thursday morning in his machine to join the club at Portage, where they play the same team at the Milwaukee convention.

"Guess it's up to little Willie to put that Lange crew in their place," he said before leaving.

Bill has 12 straight. "Bill will have a task on his hands. He goes up against Dodge, the flashy pitcher of the hit, no-run game. The Tractors are a record of 12 straight wins to his credit to date this year. He has not lost a game since the home team. He has a two hit no-run game, besides a couple of five and sixes.

Thursday is a big day at Portage. A huge crowd is due for the doings.
